Well-Laid Plans Upact.

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 6.—
With great seriousness, the Democratic members of the Senate met in caucus to-day to elect a successor to Senator Culberson, who has determined to resign as chairman of the caucus because of ili health.

A tentative program had been arranged by which Mr. Money, vice-chairman, was to be elevated to the leadership and was to decline because of disinclination to take upon himself such duties because of ill health. Senator Bacon was then to be selected as chairman. With this program agreed upon, Senator Culberson's letter was read to the assemblage, and then it was discovered that he had not resigned the chairmanship, but had merely stated his purpose of so doing. Immediately all the well-laid plans of the statesman were upset and further action was postponed until definite action is taken by the Texas Senator.

The caucus elected Thomas W. Kel-

The caucus elected Thomas W. Keller, of Yest Virginia, assistant door-keeper, which position is equivalent to a Democratic representative of the Senate. Mr. Keller has been in the employ of the Senate for thirty years.

To Suppress "White Slavery."

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 6.—Suppression of the so-called "white slave" traffic in women for illegal purposes has become the slogan of an increasingly powerful international movement, to which President Taft has given much encouragement in his comments to those who have consuited him on the subject.

This fact gives new importance to the introduction by Representative Mann, of Illinois, of a bill prescribing drastic penalties for those convicted of these practices.

"Money Meanness" Killed Victim of Bathtub Tragedy, Says Ada Patterson

three grim sisters.

Payment Refused.

In the Mutual Life John Wardlew Snead was insured for $2,000. There was one policy of $1,000, with his Aunt Virginia as beneficiary, and another, also for $1,000, making his mother, Mrs. Mary Snead, the beneficiary. The company refused payment on the ground that the death of young Snead happened until especially suspicious circumstances.

"It did not seem logical," said one officer of the company, "that this youth would kill himself by pouring kerosene over himself and setting fire to it."

The man was gaid to be insane by people in Christiansburg, but, according to his wife. Anna, he suffered up to the time of his death from acute neurasthenia, caused by the mesmeric influence of his aunts. At Lynnville he was once so wrought up by their spell, she avers, that he tried to kill himself with a pistol, but it failed to shoot.

On the policies of John Wardlaw whether, tired of life beset by the of littleness, she herself drowned the last frail spark of life in her suffering body, she died a victim of money meanness.

In Complete Control.

The remaining insurance on Fletcher and his brothers, John and Albort, appeared to be in the complete control of the three grim women who so mysteriously ruled the fortunes of this once illustrious family. Physicians of the New York Life state that an examination of the man showed he had suffered *everely from various nervous troubles, and that there were functional troubles resulting from acute nervousness, which prevented the company insuring him. It is said that most of his insurance is carried by Western companies.

A letter was discovered to-day which was believed to have been written by Fietcher, It was directed to Miss Virginia O. Wardlaw, No. 204 Montague Street, Brocklyn, and bore the stamp of Pallsades, Col. In ink was also written, "Box 396, Pallsades Mesa, Col." It was dated November 20. Officers of the Travelers said they had not yet been notified of Fletcher Snead's death. No trace of any insurance has been found on the three sistars, who have

What Money Madness Is.

The man who gambies away his life for a great fortune, and tosses the fortune to relatives or to institutions for which he cares nothing, is money mad. It is a salmaguaid of human motives with generosity as a sauce.

But money meanness is a thing of petty vileness. It has none or the spark of madness in it. It is a distinguished mark of madness that the madman is alone in his vagaries. He unjoys a splendid isolation of ideas. But if the police theory be correct there was no isolation, but a closely knitted conspiracy, concerned in the horrible death of the young, lovely and lonely woman in the drear houses in which she was guarded by four harpies. which she was guarded by four harples.

It is a horrible modern ghost story, more dreadful than that most gruesome of tales. "The Murders in the Rue Morgue." And the motive and the cause, whatever the immediate manner of the girl mother's death, was money meanness.

These four harples, if not legally her murderers, were morally so, for they throttled her with their yearning for the few thousand dollars represented by that frail thing, her life. They crushed her with the weight of their greed and froze her in the atmosphere of their love of money, withered her by fineir transfer of affection from human objects to the love of green human ob

Heapting up riches! Knowing net who may guilter?"

It is one of the ordinary decencies of life to provide against the genteel pauperism of borrowing from friends or living upon relatives. It is as incumbent upon us to seek that state of financial self-reliance as it is to be cleanly of person, or to observe the chief civilities of life. But money meanness is that laudable purpose inverted. It is proper self-reliance ingrown and become a hideous fungus.

No Meaner Than the Miser.

There is no meaner agure than the miser, no meaner quality than petty freed. It is thrift become a fetish, and economy turned to avarice.

Worship of anything less than Divine principle is vain idol worship, but the valnest of all is the worship of the money idol. Poverty, hardship, make this idol seem a huge one to the worshiper, but to all those who watch him at his worship the idol and the devotee seem pitiably small. It is noraml to work for money, but not to live for money.

It 4s one of the teings that makes life palatable to the taste, but it is nor the only thing. When we exalt it to that height the money obsession is upon us.
